

Abstract

In a mobile communication system employing the concept of transport channels in a medium access control layer, each transport channel is processed selectively in a first respectively selected manner or a second respectively selected manner in dependence on the modulation method employed in said physical layer.

1003994-123104